

FCC Commissioners
The Federal Communications Commission RE: Docket 04-435
445 12th Street, SW
Washington, DC 20554

Dear FCC Commissioners ,

I am writing to voice my concerns about the FCC's proposal to relax the restrictions on the use of cell phones on airplanes in flight.

There is no hard evidence that cell phone use doesn't interfere with navigational instruments. The introduction of cell phone use in the cabin will not only increase tension among passengers, it will compromise flight attendants' ability to maintain order in an emergency. Cell phone use could also enable terrorists to coordinate a plan of action more effectively.

If a passenger has the need to call someone on the ground and bore me to tears with their loudly spoken agenda for the next few days that passenger should PAY for his or her right to be rude and boring to boot. The airlines provide cell phones and allow inflight cell phone use. If, during flight time every idiot with a cell phone cannot resist calling someone on the ground, up to 100 people could be making calls. Will this make the plane work better? Is this safe? I don't think so. Please leave the current rules in effect.

Sincerely,

Susan Aydelotte
